"This comprehensive bibliography cites and selectively annotates more than 2,000

English-language writings by scholars and commentators who describe the influences, successes, social and economic impacts, and failures of the Green Revolution in less-developed regions.

Bibliographic entries are arranged in chapters according to geographic area and specific countries, and each entry has a chapter/number code.... Literature cited in the final two chapters deals with the Green Revolution in relation to other issues and world food problems. There is a very informative bibliographic essay about the Green Revolution by the compiler. An author index and a detailed subject index, referring to the coded entries, round out this superb compilation.... Recommended for all large agricultural and social science collections."-Choice?This comprehensive bibliography cites and selectively annotates more than 2,000 English-language writings by scholars and commentators who describe the influences, successes, social and economic impacts, and failures of the Green Revolution in less-developed regions.
